

SustainIT'10 First USENIX Workshop on Sustainable Information Technology

February 22, 2010, San Jose, CA

Co-Located with FAST 2010

<http://www.usenix.org/events/sustainit10/>

Designers of computer systems ranging from small mobile devices to massive data centers are concerned with sustainable design, including both power and lifecycle costs. Energy costs are growing rapidly, as is the cost of producing, managing, and disposing of the material from which computing systems are built. The research community and industry do not understand these issues sufficiently well, much less the trade-offs between energy used in various stages of a computer system's life and its interactions with performance, cost, reliability, usability, security, and more. The SustainIT workshop brings together researchers as well as industry practitioners in a forum that presents the latest research and practices related to making computing systems greener.

This workshop is co-located with the 8th USENIX Conference on File and Storage Technologies, FAST 2010, in order to encourage researchers from both events interact with each other. FAST'10 will take place February 23-26 in San Jose CA: <http://www.usenix.org/events/fast10/>.

Expected Attendance: 60

All sponsorships include:

- Company logo and link displayed on the workshop Web site
- Company logo featured on all workshop signage
- 1 workshop pass, 2 passes for sponsorships $5,000 and above
